25th July 2006 - Charity Event at the Daniel Galvin Salon

Denise Nicholls and Daniella Gonella are two women standing in unity against breast cancer. Denise was diagnosed 4 weeks ago and still has a long journey ahead! However, she is determined that this will not beat her. With the love and support of friends and family and in particular the help and determination of Daniella, they are focused on turning this situation around to benefit others.

One major side affect of Chemotherapy is hair loss! To show a stand and raise awareness for women, together with funds for Rainbow Child Foundation, which helps underprivileged children, (founded by Chico Slimani) Denise will, alongside Daniella be having her hair cut by stylist Lino with the first cut by Chico on the 25th July 2006 at the Daniel Galvin salon, 58-60 George Street, London W1.

Rainbow Child Foundation is a not for profit organisation currently applying for registered charity status. Rainbow Child is set to help underprivileged children all over the world in a variety of ways.

The analogy of the rainbow is that each colour is beautiful by itself, but when put together in harmony they create this great spectacle we call the rainbow. At the end of every rainbow there is a treasure, the treasure lies within us, and we must find that treasure and share it with those less fortunate than us.

Our Aim

My life's ambition and dream has always been more than just the fame game, as we both know the music business feeds your ego but I need something to feed my soul. After working closely with a few charities, surrounded by terminally ill children in Great Ormond Street Hospital, Alder Hey Hospital etc to the orphans in Thailand and Cambodia, I realised that God has blessed me with a gift to touch people and hopefully make a little difference in the world.

I am a Sufi Muslim (the mystical side of Islam) and my dream has always been about uniting the faiths, colours and creeds for the love of the brotherhood of men, through the universal language we all call MUSIC, to live in peace and harmony with one another, after all we need different notes to make a harmony, as do all the colours of the rainbow, where each colour enhances the other, so RAINBOW CHILD was born.

The aim is to provide care and spiritual understanding to the children of this world, from the aids children in Africa to the Tsunami refugees, and basically every child that we can reach and help. Inch Allah (God willing) we will be able to build schools and shelter, educate people, not only in the academic sense, but spiritual education for the self to elevate them to higher consciousness, basically to touch the untouchable, and reach the unreachable through love. Now I have the media as a tool to use I believe that one day we aim to educate, shelter, feed and nurture the underprivileged and sick children of this world.
